

Leading Australian marketing consultancy, Marketing Eye, has this month launched into the world of online journalism with the release of Marketing Eye Radio.

No stranger to being at the forefront of innovation, Marketing Eye has responded to the growing desire in the market place for instantly accessible information that can create competitive advantage in small to medium sized businesses.

"We know from our extensive research that businesses want to be kept abreast of the latest developments" said Marketing Eye CEO Mellissah Smith. "Equally, they want their information delivered quickly and easily."

Marketing Eye Radio details the latest in international and local marketing news. The fortnightly program will enhance listeners understanding of the marketing sphere and allow them to critically examine their own marketing efforts.

"Marketing Eye understands that it is not always easy for managers to step back and examine their business" said Ms Smith. "So we have provided them with an insight into the cutting edge of marketing."
